WELCOME MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE HONG KONG JOCKEY CLUB
香港賽馬會主席歡迎辭

On behalf of The Hong Kong Jockey Club, I warmly welcome to the Philanthropy for Better Cities Forum.

Over the next two days, delegates and speakers, some 1,000 in all, will debate the key social issues confronting the world’s urban populations, and most especially those in Asia Pacific and Greater China. With over half of the world’s people now living in metropolitan environments, and with many of its largest cities in Asia, this forum could not be more timely.

Equally timely is its discussion of the role philanthropy can play in addressing these issues. Our region is home to some of the world’s oldest, and newest, philanthropic bodies, with individuals, institutions and corporations increasingly seeking to give back to communities in ways that bring real and long-lasting benefits.

The Hong Kong Jockey Club has been doing just this for over 100 years. Indeed it is inherent in every aspect of our business model, encompassing not only charitable support but world-class racing and racing entertainment, a membership club and responsible wagering. It is through the synergy of these elements, working together, that the Club contributes to the betterment of Hong Kong, delivering significant economic and social value for the benefit of all.

Indeed, we were pleased to be recognized as the sixth largest non-government charity foundation in the World Charity Index 2015 – an honour we are proud to share with everyone in Hong Kong.

It is the Club’s experience that the best results are those which are achieved collaboratively. And in convening this forum, the first of its kind in Asia Pacific, the aim of The Hong Kong Jockey Club Charities Trust is to bring together the widest possible range of expertise. Drawing on the experience of world-renowned thought leaders and regional experts, we want to bring both a global and a local perspective to metropolitan social issues. We also want to explore how philanthropists can best leverage their resources to meet the social needs of the 21st century city.

We hope this forum will be the start of a wider-ranging dialogue on philanthropy in Asia Pacific and Greater China, in which Hong Kong can serve as a hub for knowledge exchange. At the Club we look forward to gaining new ideas and insights we can apply to our own work in Hong Kong. And we sincerely hope that all of you will leave informed and inspired to build even better cities, both now and in the future.

I would like to thank the Government of the Hong Kong SAR, and most especially the Home Affairs Bureau which has organized the International Philanthropic and Social Enterprise Week so magnificently. My sincere thanks also to all of the Club’s partners and stakeholders for their support. And finally, on behalf of The Hong Kong Jockey Club, I would like to pass on my very best wishes to all our speakers and delegates for a useful and productive forum.

I represent the Hong Kong Jockey Club, welcome everyone to this ‘Charities in Urban Cities’ International Conference.

This year marks the 150th anniversary of the Hong Kong Jockey Club, and we are delighted to celebrate this milestone with all of you. The Club’s long history is one of partnership, and we believe that it is through collaboration that we will continue to achieve even greater feats.

Our experience of the past 100 years is that the best results are those which are achieved collaboratively. And in convening this forum, the aim of The Hong Kong Jockey Club Charities Trust is to bring together the widest possible range of expertise. Drawing on the experience of world-renowned thought leaders and regional experts, we want to bring both a global and a local perspective to metropolitan social issues. I would like to thank the Government of the Hong Kong SAR and the Home Affairs Bureau which has been so commendable in organizing the International Philanthropic and Social Enterprise Week so magnificently. My sincere thanks also to all of the Club’s partners and stakeholders for their support. And finally, on behalf of The Hong Kong Jockey Club, I would like to pass on my very best wishes to all our speakers and delegates for a useful and productive forum.

MESSAGE FROM THE CHIEF SECRETARY FOR ADMINISTRATION, HKSAR GOVERNMENT

I would like to extend my warmest welcome to all participants at the opening of the Hong Kong International Philanthropy and Social Enterprise Week 2016 (the IPSE Week), including the Philanthropy for Better Cities Forum organised by The Hong Kong Jockey Club (HKJC) Charities Trust.

Renowned for its generosity and a strong giving culture, Hong Kong is a city of philanthropy. Over the years, the form of giving has evolved from making cash donations and voluntary work to promoting social enterprises and committing to corporate social responsibility initiatives. But the goal remains the same: to advance social good through selfless efforts.

The IPSE Week is the first event of its kind in Hong Kong. Apart from the inaugural Philanthropy for Better Cities Forum, it comprises the annual Social Enterprise Summit and Social Enterprise World Forum. The three international events will bring together the philanthropists, entrepreneurs, academicians, elites and leaders from Hong Kong and other parts of the world to deliberate on how to make the cities we live in become a better place. I am sure the Philanthropy for Better Cities Forum will give new insights for us to bring our philanthropic culture to the next higher level. I also believe that exchanges, sharing and discussion on related issues throughout the IPSE Week will create synergy in search of inspiration and new ideas for the creation of social value and impact through innovation.

The HKJC Charities Trust, being the largest benefactor in Hong Kong, has delivered a wide range of charitable projects in various policy areas over the years, addressing the needs of different social groups. Its tremendous contribution to charitable work is not only highly recognized by Hong Kong people but also widely acclaimed abroad. The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government will continue to work in partnership with the HKJC Charities Trust, other relevant organisations and stakeholders to advance the spirit of mutual care and support in the community for the betterment of Hong Kong.

I wish the Philanthropy for Better Cities Forum every success.

Mrs Carrie Lam
Chief Secretary for Administration,
The Government of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region

MESSAGE FROM THE FINANCIAL SECRETARY, HKSAR GOVERNMENT

香港特別行政區政府財政司司長

The desire for better lives and better living standards has been present since the existence of human civilizations. As we search for an ideal world and build our homes and cities, the relationships between individuals as well as the relationship between individual and community are also constantly changing. In every generation, new environment and new ideas will prompt fresh thoughts about what constitutes a better place to live, and philanthropists of each generation continues to play a unique role in realizing their visions for a better world.

As Asia’s economic power grows by an exponential rate, many Asian cities rise to new prominence in the international arena, and at the same time face the challenges such as ageing population, growing demand for livelihood support, technological advancement, environmental conservation as well as maintaining sustainable development.

This conference on Philanthropy for Better Cities provides a timely opportunity for us to exchange new ideas, share experiences and identify innovative solutions for various social issues, for the purpose of building a prosperous and inclusive society that everyone can be empowered and contribute to the community.

Mrs Carrie Lam
Chief Secretary for Administration,
The Government of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region
MESSAGE FROM KEYNOTE SPEAKER

I am honored to participate in this year’s Philanthropy for Better Cities Forum, convened by The Hong Kong Jockey Club Charities Trust, a major philanthropist and a remarkable organisation in many ways that has played an important role in the Hong Kong community. The forum’s goal is to bring together a range of stakeholders to discuss tackling society’s challenges with a particular focus on urban issues.

The social problems facing cities are well-known to all of us, but they are large and challenging. We have problems with health, the environment and citizens who cannot find work and earn a living wage – problems in virtually every social field of which we are aware. What we understand is that to address these problems everywhere, not just in cities, we need to initiate a conversation that cuts across many sectors.

There is much we can learn about working together to tackle these societal problems. This forum is a good starting point – an opportunity for all of us to learn and engage about the critical societal issues facing the world. We have learned from the past that if we are going to make progress on these areas, we need a strategic approach. We cannot give money to every organisation. We need to go beyond traditional approaches and engage the private sector.

This forum will cast a spotlight on the role of philanthropy. How does philanthropy create value, not just give money? How do foundations leverage their unique strengths and skills, and how can philanthropic organisations and foundations play a key role in bringing the various actors together?

I look forward to being with all of you, and I could not be more committed to the importance of the questions that we will discuss and the solutions in which all of you can participate.

Shared Value for Better Cities

Conference says there is a significant trade-off between business and social benefits. Many believe that business success comes at the cost of social well-being and that social benefits harm profits. On the contrary, the concept of shared value suggests that social and economic values can be created together by addressing social issues with a business proposition. As Professor Michael Porter explains, shared value is not the same as corporate social responsibility or philanthropy. Rather, creating shared value is about the core of the business strategy.

In this keynote address, Professor Michael Porter will discuss the concept of shared value and how it can be applied to philanthropic undertakings in urban settings. As the father of modern business strategy, Professor Porter is an expert in competitive strategy for both the corporate world and the social field. He will also examine the link between shared value and philanthropy in the context of cities’ competitiveness and social progress.

Foundations and Cities 慈善基金與城市交流

This session will address how foundations can play a role in fostering better cities and in leveraging philanthropy in order to tackle social issues in urban settings.

It will also explore how foundations are changing in response to macro trends, how cross-learning across corporate and nonprofit sectors takes place, and how governance structures and mission statements influence the ability of foundations across to innovate and create social impact.

Robert Rosen is the director of Philanthropic Partnerships. In this role, he leads a team that oversees the foundation’s relationship with philanthropists and charitable organizations across the globe. Previously, Mr. Rosen served as Political Director for Senator Edward M. Kennedy, and as the White House Assistant to the President and Director of Advance for President Clinton.

Robert Rosen received a Juris Doctorate from Cornell Law School and a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Vermont.

Robert Rosen is a co-founder of the Global Philanthropy Institute and President and CEO of The Kresge Foundation, a US$3 billion private, national foundation dedicated to expanding opportunities for vulnerable people in America’s cities. Since 2000, he has expanded Kresge’s grantmaking and investing tools to improve the economic, social, cultural and environmental conditions of urban life across the nation and in Kresge’s home state of Michigan. The foundation made grant and investment commitments totaling more than US$145 million.

In November 2015, Dr. Wang was appointed the first president of the China Global Philanthropy Institute (CGPI), a nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting innovative, high-impact philanthropy through education and training. Founded by prominent Chinese and American philanthropists, Bill Gates, Ray Dalio, Li Ka-Shing, He Qian, and Wu Qiong, CGPI is dedicated to advancing philanthropy in China by implementing the professional standards of philanthropic education, strengthening international dialogue and cooperation, and promoting innovative reforms in global philanthropy. Dr. Wang also helps the Beijing Normal University China Philanthropy Research Institute (PCR), which he helped found in 2010. Under Dr. Wang’s leadership, the CPR has become a leading philanthropy think-tank, which drives national discourse on China’s social services and charitable sector. In addition to its research, CPR also provides professional philanthropy consulting services and has completed a number of influential projects related to charity law and policy reform, child welfare and senior citizen service systems reform.

Dr. Wang previously worked for over 22 years at China’s Ministry of Civil Affairs (MOC) where he was instrumental in launching a number of national policies including direct village elections and the country’s urban rural minimum welfare social safety net system. Following the devastating Wenchuan earthquake, he established the National Disaster Response System, a four-tiered mechanism for coordinating emergency response. While at MOC, Dr. Wang also focused on expanding social security benefits to the country’s most vulnerable, reforming the national welfare system to provide allowances and greater support to groups such as orphans and senior citizens.

Developments in China’s Philanthropic Landscape
中國慈善發展趨勢

In recent years, Chinese philanthropists have become increasingly involved in private, corporate and institutional giving. The constant stream of new policies, particularly the newly-adopted Charity Law, offers a better environment for philanthropic activities, making giving easier and more attractive. However, according to Harvard University’s recent China Philanthropy Project report, philanthropy is still a relatively small sector in China. In 2014, giving accounted for just 0.1% of China’s gross domestic product (GDP). This falls short of the 2% of GDP in the US and 0.4% in India. The increased interest in giving among the new generation of Chinese entrepreneurs may change the situation and help expand the philanthropic space.

This session will address learning points and best practice sharing between Mainland Chinese foundations and philanthropic institutions compared with their international counterparts.

China’s philanthropy environment, like that in many countries, is still experiencing growth and development. Various regulatory policies have been implemented to promote and support the growth of Chinese philanthropy. As the leading researcher in the field, Dr. Ming Wang, Dean of the Institute for Philanthropy at Tsinghua University, will lead today’s panel discussion on developments in China’s philanthropic landscape.

Ming Wang is a leading scholar in China’s philanthropy sector. As the Dean of the Institute for Philanthropy at Tsinghua University, he has been instrumental in shaping the field through his research and advocacy. Mr. Wang’s insights will undoubtedly enrich the discussions on developments in China’s philanthropic landscape.

As the session progresses, participants will have the opportunity to ask questions and share their own experiences and perspectives on philanthropy in China and beyond. This interactive format will facilitate a deeper understanding of the challenges and opportunities within the philanthropic sector.

To conclude, the day’s discussions will reaffirm the importance of philanthropy in fostering social development and community building. Whether it is through direct financial contributions or by offering resources and expertise, philanthropy plays a crucial role in addressing social needs and promoting positive change.
A. Philanthropy in Youth and Education

Our youth are the pillars of our society, supporting its growth and development. The multifaceted nature of the world today demands an informed and skilled citizenry. While education has been one of the most widely funded philanthropic initiatives globally, how can philanthropy in education keep up with the rapidly-changing demands of our global world and stay relevant?

With the help of philanthropists, scholarship schemes have been established to empower underprivileged youth. Young people are also encouraged to explore their talents and unleash their full potential in different disciplines through developmental programmes. This session will highlight philanthropy's role and approach in tackling the key issues surrounding youth and education, whilst featuring successful initiatives that are exemplary in their field.

C. Environment and Sustainability
環境與可持續發展

Over half the world’s population live in urban areas, consuming 78% of the planet's total energy and producing 60% of its greenhouse gas emissions. The sustainability of our communities, businesses and organisations is key to minimising our impact on the environment and safeguarding our future quality of life.

This session will demonstrate how stakeholders of local, regional and international scale are addressing environmental issues, and the role of philanthropic institutions in influencing the responses. It will also address how capital markets can support resilient cities and communities by promoting economic opportunities to achieve global sustainability.

D. Role of Philanthropy in Social Investing

Given the limitations of traditional philanthropic efforts in achieving their desired impact, social investors are now seeking new tools to maximise their impact. Many investors have become increasingly interested in social enterprises and projects and are actively engaged in their development.

This session will discuss the role of philanthropy in contributing to the social investing space. How does social investing differ from philanthropy? How does impact investing interact with the social investing space? What is more important in social investing – the rate of financial return, or the rate of social return?

The discussion will provide a common ground for sharing expertise on what works in investing for impact.

E. Leveraging Technology as a Philanthropic Tool
善用科技，慈善創新

Today's tech philanthropists are characterised by a venture capital mindset: instead of waiting for potential investors, they are proactively seeking them out. They also tend to be impact-driven and prefer quantifiable, tangible results. This leads to less risk aversion and potentially higher returns, which in turn encourages further giving.

This session will focus on the role of technology and the impact of technological advances on traditional philanthropic processes and capabilities. It will also discuss how institutions can adopt these strategies going forward.

H. Public-Private Partnerships to Scale Impact

Philanthropies have long engaged in public-private partnerships (PPPs). Those aim to provide a neutral environment for governments to collaborate with the private sector, NGOs and individuals in ways otherwise not possible. The trend of increasing PPPs in both developed and developing regions attests to the potential of such collaborations to create and scale social impact.

This session will showcase the role of public-private partnerships in scaling solutions for social impact to address urban issues. In particular, the speakers will examine challenges and opportunities for PPPs in the philanthropic context.

Day 1 has been filled with insights as to how philanthropy can contribute to the life of cities. Be it via education, health, environment or public-private partnerships, philanthropy can play a key role in creating better living and working environments. This concept of shared value is crucial as it sheds light on the fact that everyone can reap benefits from the interplay and synergies between the public, private and non-profit sectors.

This session will summarise the main lessons of the day. Using Ms Helen Cadbury's compelling personal experience in fighting inequality and building resilient communities, it will look ahead and link the main findings of Day 1 with the expectations of Day 2.

Ben Saunders
World Record-breaking Polar Explorer and the Ambassador for The Prince’s Trust

“I am an explorer of limits – geographically, physically and mentally. It’s about pure human endeavour, and the way in which I can inspire others to explore their own personal potential.”

Polar explorer and world record-breaking long-distance skier Ben Saunders is a man making history. Best known for leading one of the most ambitious polar expeditions in a century, he was the first to successfully complete the epic, 105-day, 1,800-mile trek on foot to retrace Captain Robert Falcon Scott’s ill-fated, early 20th-century journey to the South Pole – equivalent to running 80 marathons back-to-back.

Mr Saunders has five North Pole expeditions under his belt and has accomplished some of the world’s most impressive polar expeditions. He is the youngest person to ski solo to the North Pole and holds the record for the longest solo Arctic journey by a Briton.

A speaker at the 2005, 2012, and 2014 TED conferences, Mr Saunders was featured in the 2016 New York Times best-seller TED Talks: The Official Guide to Public Speaking, which was published by TED chief Chris Anderson. In the book, he is described by Chris as a “powerful storyteller” with a penchant for surprising audiences.

KEYNOTE DIALOGUE

Where East meets West - Philanthropic Developments & the Role of Technology

中西交流 - 科技與慈善發展

Philanthropy is a culture. However, when fitted into the broader context of Eastern or Western cultures, it takes on different forms. While the act of giving has become a culture in the West, such efforts in the East have only recently become popular. According to research from the Harvard China Philanthropy Project, giving in the US accounted for 2% of GDP in 2014, while the figure in China was just 0.1%. In terms of absolute giving, there is a large gap. At the same time, there are similar trends in both cultures. Globally, there is an emergence of a new generation of social entrepreneurs and a trend towards wider public participation. With the help of technology, doing philanthropy has become easier and more inclusive. These similarities create opportunities for cross-learning and synergies.

This keynote dialogue seeks to show the similarities and differences in philanthropic giving around the world through discussions between leading figures in philanthropy from the East and West. Its aim is to uncover enlightening insights that can facilitate better co-operation.

What do companies gain from philanthropic engagement? Beyond their desire to further the cause important for their work and to spark public interest in certain social issues, companies are also seeking alternative ways of promoting their businesses. In short, philanthropy helps to build business relationships, establish brands and improve employees’ motivation and engagement. This raises the question: is there a specific way in which companies select philanthropic projects?

The speakers in this session will address issues related to the application process, such as dealing with potential favouritism and cronynism; the setting of strict and specific selection criteria; and the building of strong and sustainable working relationships with non-profit organisations and social enterprises.

Celebrity endorsement, the ability to lead corporate social responsibility initiatives, and success in corporate branding are key factors in gaining public interest. However, there are also concerns about the risk of favouritism andcronynism in the selection process. This panel will discuss how to establish effective working relationships with non-profit organisations and social enterprises.

K. Role of Business in Philanthropy

There are numerous ways in which corporations can engage in philanthropy, ranging from complex investments to volunteering programmes. These efforts have the potential to improve community relations, boost morale, build a better workforce and generate competitive advantages. However, many corporate philanthropic strategies are ineffective, wasting valuable resources on initiatives that do not meaningfully contribute to society.

This track will discuss how corporations can be more strategic in their philanthropy. Can philanthropy adjust to market forces? Are there common values shared by the market and the social do-gooders? If so, can the synergy of business acumen and social capital be combined to create social impact?

Day 2

Day 2 has been replete with personal stories and experiences in the context of philanthropy and technology, philanthropy and social finance, and philanthropy and the arts. What lessons are to be drawn from all these personal accounts?

In this session, two prominent figures in Hong Kong’s public policy, Mr Mingval Laos, Chairman of Commission on Youth, and Mr Winfried Engelbrecht-Bresges, CEO of the Hong Kong Jockey Club, will summarise the main insights and lessons of the day while reflecting on the entire conference, linking some of the burning urban issues explored in Day 1 to the solutions proposed on Day 2.

The second day of the conference will feature two panels, one on innovation, finance and tourism and the other on young people, and will feature sharing and discussions on these topics. We welcome all our participants and would love to hear your suggestions on how we can better serve the community.

The Foundation Circle session is facilitated by Social Innovation Exchange (SIX). It will provide an opportunity to dive deeper, enabling foundations to explore more innovative ways of supporting their philanthropic work, and to think more systematically about their approach. Through the discussions, we hope learning will be shared across foundations not only within Hong Kong but also internationally, so that the cross-fertilisation of ideas can spur the creation of new solutions aimed at tackling the most entrenched social issues affecting cities today.

In her keynote, she will highlight how Social Innovation Exchange (SIX) supports, provides space for, and fosters dialogue between social innovators and philanthropists, enabling them to bring new ideas to market and to scale. In this way, SIX is helping to create a more inclusive and sustainable future for all.

AVA ASIA VALUE ADVISORS

Asia Value Advisors (AVA) is a leading philanthropy and leadership advisory firm that seeks to inform, inspire and engage individuals and organizations to create sustainable impact. It was founded by Phil Alito in 2011 and is based in Hong Kong.

We envision a future where sustainability and staying competitive need not be a trade-off and can be valued holistically incorporating economic, social and environmental impacts.

We believe this vision can be achieved through our work via:

Advisory services – to inform, inspire and engage philanthropic funders in doing good while doing well

Philanthropy research – to create thought leadership research on entrepreneurial philanthropy, social impact investing, and charitable giving

Bespoke programs – to design and implement programs that advance the philanthropic ecosystem

Convening and program curation - in relation to philanthropy, social impact investing, profit-with-purpose initiatives
